Na, es wird gefahren, was auf den Server kommt! ;-)

(willst Du etwa Ã¼ben? kann ich mir nicht vorstellen...)

Hi fellowdrivers,

why in h*ll to keep these event facts secret?

There are already surprise events, why make normal events the same?

There is no continuity with the event facts told - sometimes with slightest detail, sometimes you have to squeeze out every bite.

Some want to practice beforehand, some may just have no time to join until the qualification session.

What's wrong with practice? At a track like Monaco it may well save you from many unnecessary crashes and disappointments.

I wonder too why to drive the Supercup '09 just like it was last year?

I understand there are lots of new drivers that have not driven this Supercup before, but what does it have to offer to us who have already driven it trough?

There is countless number of track/car combinations not driven at any event so far.

At Pilsbierbude they drive their World Tour '09 with "same" timetable and tracks but different car each time - that's my choice this year!

I still love to drive events here but I find some "small" things like this irrational occasionally.

One big positive thing by my opinion has been the timetable for most events lately - 45 mins practice and 15 mins qualification make the events much more intense, thanks! :cheer:

Cheers,
Timo

Get ready to ride the 2006 Version.

Cheers

P.S. ...as the Porsche Supercup is the "mother" of all events all over the Bierbuden it takes place every year.
